A postmaster in one of the country offices near here had the misfortune to lose his helpmeet. She left him for another and he at once secured one of our popular probate court divorcees, which of course proved to be a good. This week a letter was received from him. He complains that he is without a cook and that the patrons of his office are continually calling upon him while he is engaged in his culinary operations and burnt grub is the result. He is tired of this, and asks for legal advice as to whether it would be considered bigamy should he engage a cook. A reply will be mailed to him assuring him that such an act would constitute no offence, and that should he secure the services of an epicurean artist he would violate no postal regulations. Here is an opportunity for a good male cook to secure a situation.—Oklahoman.

A BOY'S SELF SACRIFICE.

Reduced to Poverty He Commits Suicide to Save His Mother. Details of the sad suicide of a boy of 12 in Dublin were given in the Dublin Social Review last week. In a house in the Gombie lived a family consisting of a mother and four children, who had been well-to-do people and were well connected, but owing to the bankruptcy and suicide of the father had been reduced to poverty and obliged to live in one room, which three other families almost occupied. They were in rags and almost starving.

A little son of 12 was so distracted at the sufferings of his mother and sisters that, in despair of being able to support them, he bought with the few shillings which he had earned some articles of clothing and papers entitling the buyer to insurance coupons. He then went and drowned himself in order that his family might be helped out of misery by his death. In his childish ignorance he did not know that his doing so would be considered a fraud and bring no benefit whatever to his dear ones. This is the letter which the poor child wrote to his mother before he went to his death:

"DEAR MOTHER: I spent the four and sixpence half penny for you benefit, and I hope the money it will bring you will help you to forgive my rash act. Tell the police to search in the harbor of Portobello and when they have found me get them to write a description of my clothes and what I have in my pockets. They will find a cap that cost six-pence and will entitle you to £200 insurance money; pair of suspenders, 4/6d, with a coupon on them for £300; a belt, 6d, for £100, and papers, one entitling you to £1,000 and the others to £500 each—in all £3,150. Don't spend too much on my funeral, and mind the money, which will make you rich. Your loving son,

"FERDINAND DE FREYNE RIKENI DE COURCY."

Georgia's Old Capitol.

The old capitol building of Georgia at Milledgeville, which was burned the other day, was built in 1803, but since the capital of the state was moved to Atlanta it has been used as a college for girls. The ordinance of secession was passed under its roof, as was the new constitution under which Georgia renewed her relations with the Union, and all the men of the state of national reputation made their local fame within its walls.

Last Year's Fatalities on the Lakes. Navigation of the great lakes during the season of 1893 resulted in the loss of 123 lives. The number of vessels lost was 53, with an aggregate tonnage of 24,258, and valued at $1,040,400. Partial losses by strandings, collisions and fires bring the total up to $2,112,548. The shallow waters of Lake Erie claimed nearly half the lives lost. Lake Huron being second.
